

The Bottom line

Human beings are constantly being conditioned, consciously or unconsciously, by exposure to:

- the kind of books we read;
- the kind of movies and TV programs we watch;
- the kind of music we listen to;
- the kind of company we keep.

While driving to work, if we listen to the same music every day for several days, and if the tape deck breaks down, guess what tune we will be humming?

Insanity is defined as doing the same thing over and over and expecting different results.

If you keep doing what you have been doing, you will keep getting what you have gotten.

The most difficult thing about changing a habit is unlearning what is not working and learning positive habits.

If you want to be successful, You will have do major changes in your subconscious (read memory) .

The Universe is like a computer as well in that we human beings program the code of the software into the cosmic computer by informing it precisely, in seemingly complex, but overly simple instructions. In other words, the software of the Universe, which will execute the instructions (your wish is my command) we “program” into it, provided we know the rule of “programming language” that the Universe responds to, including the specific set of “task” initiating strings of code.

Put another way, the Universe, much like a computer, can be thought of as an interface that produces results in accordance with the instructions it has been given by you, the programmer (creator). If you make a programming error, the results will come back with an error report (i.e. the results you get will seem erroneous to you). But, when you properly understand the rules and syntax of this language, what I will call MPL (manifestation programming language), you will be able to create the results you want.

Here are the rules of MPL that will allow you to yield the results you want in your life.

- Every instruction begins with your intention. Thus, the best way to instruct the cosmic computer to execute any task for you is by beginning your request with the words, "it is my intention to/that..."
- You must provide as the rest of your instruction the very specific details of what, when, where, and why in each request
- You can not instruct the cosmic computer in any way about the 'how' and 'who' of a request. These are "syntax errors." The cosmic computer has built in instructions that are beyond our comprehension that can't be overridden when it comes to 'how' and 'who.'
- Giving the same instructions to the cosmic computer twice has the affect of canceling out the request all together. You must only intend for something to happen once if it is to happen.

The Universe is a perfect computer that is not possible of making mistakes. Thus, the output generated in your life has only generated what you perceive to be errors because of your violation of this very strict set of "syntax" rules. If you fully understand the language of MPL, you will never again create things in your life that you do not want. In fact, you will find just the opposite, that truly you are the creator (programmer) of your own life , and the only reason you have ever experienced any kind of dissatisfaction in your life is because you didn't know these rules. Now you do. Apply them to your life and behold at the awesome speed and precision with which the Universe produces the desired outcome in your life, on every level of your life.
